"Dr Einstein has appeared in public only 3 times since his arrival, and they were to attend a series of lectures by the Belgian Scientist, Abbe Lemaitre, who gained (recently) attention by reason of his spectacular views on the expansion of the universe.
These lectures were on Eddington's theory of the interaction of electric charges, a very obscure piece of work. Dr E., in a smug, was seated in the front row with Professors Veblen, Weyl & von Neumann, all of the Inst., and together they made an imposing lineup. During the course of the lecture these celebrities paid the lecturer with questions, and the differences of opinion which they voiced, coupled with frank acknowledgment of their inability to understand Eddington's discourse, proved to be both entertaining and reassuring to the rest of the audience!"

-3 File C (ca-cd. 1933-1941 Misc. Corresp.
Otis M. Caldwell to Flexner 4/26/31 suggesting "I have just looked over your Bulletin again. Why do you ask men to form a staff in the Institute?
Why not finance real students and send them to work with the right men, adding to the remunerations of these 'right men' in terms of what they can do for the students.
Such a plan would involve complications, but by so doing you would become a sort of higher guide to all sorts of special students and would avoid all the complications and antagonisms that will come with a staff of men who are mature and individualistic

At least, you could do some such work as I suggest and keep your staff down to a small number of very special men.

"By use, at least in part, of this plan, you would finance each student and instructor for a limited period, thus simplifying your financial problems."
Otis W. Caldwell was Director of the <sup>Institute of</sup> School Experimentation at Teachers College, Columbia possess them myself, which just makes me the happily symmetrical with others <sup>who are</sup> in the same boat."

Note. On application of Spencer Head but read by publications on social & economic subjects, R.B. Warren advises Adelotta, for whom he has read the work, that the man is a original, thoughtful, narrow, selfish opinionated thinker who, tho he comes much good of adu front & Henry George, apparently has never read the works. Then:

"But he must be a lovable person, and he has permeated some of the most profound and neglected questions of our times. If he were 50 years younger, I would wish he could become a member of the Institute. But my experience with Rushmore does not ~~not~~ encourage me to believe that a man of that age is capable of an unpaired, in discipline."

For organization: Ralph Barton Perry, Chas. Howard's Defense asked Wheelers for a grant, he refused, apparently on the ground that efforts for these ends should be unified.
