Earle reports to Aydelotte on the seminar two hours weekly with occasional extra sessions.

Following members of the Institute were members of the seminar: Dr. Thomas A. Bailey, Dr. Edward Mead Earle, Dr. Felix Gilbert, Dr. John Herz, Dr. J. Rumney, Mrs. Margaret Sprout, Dr. Alfred Vagts (Beard's son-in-law), Dr. Albert K. Weinberg.

From Princeton University the following attended:
Dr. Gilbert Chinard, Dr. Harold Sprout and Dr. Charles P. Stacey.

This is a full report on the seminars during which Earle says that five years ago he had had to turn his attention toward military strategy as an instrument of foreign policy. He outlines the qualifications of the participants.

Total		$74,000

AT this rate the seminar for two years would cost about IX $150,000, over and above present budget.

This budget contemplates Dodds will take care of McIlwain and Chinard and other members of the Princeton faculty who would cooperate.

In the letter accompanying the budget, Aydelette asks whether if the Rockefeller Foundation were willing to provide half of the $150,000 needed, Mrs. Fuld and Mr. Bamberger would provide the other half. He thinks that the study might begin in February, 1944, but if it began in September, 1944, a good many of the younger members whom he has in mind could apply for Guggenheim Fellowships in October.

Bamberger to Aydelotte, September 4, 1943.

He and Mrs. Fuld have decided to provide half the amount needed for the Study of American Civilization if the Rockefeller Foundation were willing to provide the other half.

Meeting of four to plan for seminars 1947-48; subject European financial, fiscal and monetary problems. Two meetings per month instead of one as in 1946-47. Lunch and afternoon. Personnel selected in program outlined.

Decided to have a full-time assistant to organize material on current foreign developments, charts etc. Vera Lutz mentioned--(no provision for preparation of reports or papers for publication? Apparently not) Warren kept notes of discussions, sometimes with the papers presented by individual members and sometimes without. In two cases in 1946 papers were submitted 1 revised after discussion and before publication. In others same may have been true. Warren's notes show 9 meetings seminar 11/12/46 to 5/12/47.

Papers regarding this fromfile are attached to Chronological Copy of this Memorandum and filed under 1928 1946, 9/26.

Mr. Stewart asked the Director if he wished to consider long-range plans, and Oppenheimer replied it might be wiser to consider long-range plans at a later date.

Riefler brought up the subject of the monetary seminar "which is operating at a very high level on problems that are now becoming immediate as well as acute. He suggested it might be well to write to the head of the Federal Reserve Board, the head of the International Monetary Fund, and the head of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, suggesting to them that the Institute would be prepared to consider the appointment of members nominated from the staffs of those institutions. The idea is that these younger economists come to Princeton for the full academic year to work on monetary problems and to participate in the seminar. They would be supported by their institutions. The Institute would, of course, reserve the right to accept or reject nominees."

No action is taken and there is no comment in the minutes which were prepared by Earle.
