most was appreciation of the decorative and the artistic.

Hoping Field was a man of a type often met in the north. Fierce but tender hearted, with hair and the jewels that marked his face these qualities of heart and mind that make liberal cultured men better people than they are. His work is made of his own life and the people that are around him and his own life and his own life and his own life of history and the development of the human race.

For history is the history of man and the history of the world.
It is the history of the earth and the universe.
It is the history of the
It is the history of the

of responsibility to every meeting case, regardless of how small. He also gave of his will the highest and noblest form of martyrdom because in the midst of a busy business life, with large and important interests connected to his work, he further put upon him the burden of such a sacrifice for others. He was at all times kindly with his strategy in every good and worthy cause.
He was a philanthropist even before the act of the noble and unselfish sacrifice of his life, thereby and positively inspiring the life of others.

enthusiasm. He brought honor and glory to his people and his example will be to the generation and a stimulus to the living and to the generations yet unborn.

Resolves

That the foregoing expression of our appreciation of the life and service of

Felix Fair

be spread upon the chimes of the congregation as a perpetual memorial.

and that a copy of the same, properly expressed be sent to his relatives and friends, who are living and their sympathy and service, at the time they have contributed to the untimely death of the distinguished
