Biographical/Historical note

The establishment of the Institute for Advanced Study's School of Social Science in 1973 was preceded by earlier examples of the Institute's engagement in the social science disciplines. Chief among these was the School of Economics and Politics, which operated from 1933-1949, until its absorption into the newly created School of Historical Studies. Also, during his tenure as IAS Director (1947-1966), Robert Oppenheimer spearheaded the Psychology Advisory Committee, which included among its objectives the recommendation of scholars in the field to invite to the Institute.

Carl Kaysen, who had been a professor of political economy at Harvard University, had been brought on as IAS Director with a mandate to "extend the range of work at the Institute to include some work in the social sciences." Under his leadership, the School of Social Science started its history with the 1968-1969 academic year as a three-year pilot program variously called "Program in the Social Science," "Social Science Program," and "Social Sciences Program," with funding from the Russell Sage Foundation and the Carnegie Corporation, which donated $250,000 each. Other prominent funding agencies from the earliest history of the Program, and later of the School, included the Ford Foundation, The 1907 Foundation (now The UPS Foundation), and the National Science Foundation.

The three-year pilot was conceived with the intention of focusing on specific issues, the most successful of which was the topic of social change, though others, including human and social information processing, were explored. In the first years of the Program, roughly five scholars per academic year were invited. The Program also offered seminars, often in conjunction with scholars in the School of Historical Studies. (Weekly seminars are an on-going activity of the School held during the academic term, and collaboration with the School of Historical Studies continued into the 1980s, when each of the Schools branched off to support seminar series of their own.)

Anthropologist Clifford Geertz was appointed to the Faculty in 1970, and it was initially hoped that three appointments in the social sciences would be made before the Program became the Institute's fourth School. Appointing the third Faculty member, after Geertz and Kaysen himself, proved difficult, however. Internal issues regarding the process of appointments to the Faculty came to a head between the Director, the Board of Trustees, and the Faculty, most notably with the hiring of Robert Bellah, who was appointed by Kaysen over the objections of some of the Institute's Faculty, then resigned before assuming the post. In 1973, an agreement was reached by all parties that the School of Social Science would be launched despite there still being only two members of the School's Faculty.

The following year, however, there was already a third Faculty appointment to the School, economist Albert O. Hirschman, and the School found its footing. By the time of Kaysen's Report of the Director: 1966-1976, he had much to say about the School: "The program began in 1968-69 on a modest scale with four visiting members. Since then, we have had almost 100 members, an excellent and diverse group including anthropologists, demographers, economists, economic historians, historians, political scientists, sociologists and social psychologists. They have included established leaders and promising young scholars from universities in this country, Latin America, England, Europe, the Middle East and Asia." In many ways, this description of the School of Social Science continues to apply today, though it has hosted many more Members and expanded into additional disciplines and geographic areas since then.

The smallest of the Institute's Schools, the School of Social Science has supported a maximum Faculty of four with the following appointments made in the indicated years: Michael Walzer (1980) specializing in political theory and moral philosophy; Joan Wallach Scott (1985) specializing in labor and critical history; Eric Maskin (2000), specialist in economic theory; Danielle Allen (2007) in political theory; and Didier Fassin (2009) in social anthropology. The School has also supported long-term appointments, including Thomas S. Kuhn, Wolf Lepeneis, Bernard Lewis, and Adam Ashforth. The School supports 15-20 Members each year, as well as Visitors and Research Assistants.

The School designates a theme for each year "to create a sense of community among the Members." These annual themes are often brought together under a more general theme for anywhere from one to four years, and are intended to guide but be the exclusive direction for work in the School at the time. The first theme (1973-74) was "Islamic Societies." Examples of other past themes include: "Toward a Broader Economics" (1983-84) and "The Rule of Law Under Pressure" (2007-08). An example of a general theme would be "Globalization and the Different Kinds of Local Resistance to It: A Three-Year Program" (1997-2000), which included the annual themes: "Universalism of Human Right," "Political Economy," and "Cultural Globalization."

Conditions Governing Access note

Administrative records of the Institute are closed for 30 years from the date of creation. In addition, letters of recommendation are closed until both the author and the subject of the recommendation have died.

Related Materials

Related Archival Materials note

In psychology, there are materials in two other locations. Folders for scholars in the field associated with the IAS predating the establishment of the School of Social Science are found in the People Series of the School of Natural Sciences records. Also, there are ten folders in the Director's Office: General files under the heading "Psychology, Advisory Committee on," which date chiefly from the later half of the 1950s.

Custodial History note

Exteriors of document boxes containing the academic years 1972-1973 through 1979-1980 were marked "From West Basement," which would indicate that they were deposited together in the Archives and had been previously stored in the basement of West Building on the IAS campus.

Member files for the School of Social Science spanning the years 1980-1985 were deposited by the Administrative Officer of the School, Debbie Koehler, in 2001.

Arrangement note

Files are arranged in chronological order, and are then alphabetical within each academic year, most often with Visitors and Assistants at the end of the run for the academic year. Note that the title of "Assistant" was changed in 1987 to "Research Assistant." Scholars affiliated with the School for more than a single year will have separate files for each year of their association with the School.

Scope and Contents note

The Members, Assistants, Visitors Series of the Records of the School of Social Science is an ongoing series that currently includes the academic years 1972-1973 through 1998-1999. Earlier files for scholars affiliated with the School and its predecessors are found in the Members Files Series of the Records of the Office of the Director. In the field of psychology, earlier files for scholars affiliated with the School and its predecessors are found in the People Series of the Records of the School of Natural Sciences. Documentation in the files includes letters of inquiry, membership application forms, project descriptions, letters of recommendation, final reports and other supporting materials related to applications and scholarly work, as well administrative details.

Separated Materials note

Members, Assistants, Visitors

Some files contained photographs of the scholar, most often taken in their Institute for Advanced Study campus office. These photographs were moved to The Shelby White and Leon Levy Archives Center photograph collection with other photographs from the School of Social Science.
