As a result of Oppenheimer's acceptance of Miss Sach's recommendation May 23, 1949, the collection was turned over to Princeton Library during Mr. Boyd's absence:

"While I was away last summer, Mr. Heyl, Associate Librarian, acknowledged the 'gift' of the Mayan manuscripts presented to the Institute by Mr. Robert Garrett. Inasmuch as Mr. Garrett gave these manuscripts to the Institute with a reversionary condition, I am sure you will agree that they should be recorded as a gift from Mr. Garrett rather than from the Institute. I am, therefore, correcting our records to indicate this.

"I have recently had a letter from Mr. Garrett in which he apparently assumed that the manuscripts were still at the Institute. I told him about our conversation and about the subsequent transfer of the collection. I also apologized for both of us, assuring him that you had assumed I would inform him, and I had assumed he already knew about it, so that niether of us did anything about it. It doesn't really matter, rex except that Mr. Garrett is the kind of man who likes to be informed."

This is a sad end to a very intensive correspondence between Gates and Flexner, and between McComas, Garrett, and Aydelotte about the main Gates collection which was ultimately purchased by the Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah, in October, 1946, leaving somewhat over $11,500 worth of still very valuable, unique and useable material for/sale.

(Charles A. Musas to Aydelotte, October 25, 1946, ibid.)

Copies of letters of May 23, 1949 from Miss Sachs to Oppenheimer, and September 14, 1944, from Aydelotte to McComas, are filed in Chronological file with this memorandum under 1930-1950.

SISTORY OF ART

As early as February, 1931, Professor Horey was soliciting attention from "lexner on his School's suggestions for broader training and also a Frinceton Faculty group's offorts to secure a new library for Princeton University. The group which eigned the undated memorandum asking for a program for a humanistic library for Princeton includes the following: William S. Carpenter, James T. Cerould, C. Johnson, David McCabe, Allan W. C. Mensies, Sherley W. Morgan, M. Saldwin Smith, Chairman, Hangamandungakan Raymond J. Sontag. Duene R. Stuart, Frederick C. Tarr, Willerd Thorp. Flexner replies February 20, 1931, and says he is well aware that he has matters to discuss with Dr. Horey but that he is going abroad. April 9, 1934, Morey to Flormer. This follows a conversation had earlier. The lett or is the potentiality of the Frinceton group working on archeology and the history of art, and the plans for the department which are included in a lengthy memorandum which includes also an account of the status in 1932 of research of art and ercheology in Frinceton. The plans for possible expansion in the research group and the mood for personnel are outlimed together with a discussion of research facilities. Those are in the files.

Again Flowner went to Europe (June, 1934), but there is little doubt that in the year intervening between the first letter in June, 1934, the two men have seen much of each other and have done a great deal of planning. The file from this point on largely conserns itself with the efforts which they made to shorten fanofsky's term at New York University (he had a year and a half to serve in June, 1934) with the idea of getting him to Primeton.

Other personnel is mentioned which is being recruited by one or the other of the two groups. For instance, Weltzmann, Schlunk, Buntington, Berold Willoughby, Rock, Behweitser, Helen Franc at Wellely, David H. Robb, esseciate professor at Colgate (all of these are mentioned in a letter from Flexner to Morey, June 14, 1934.

The Institute appropriated $6,000 for the work of Schlunk and Weitzmann in this country.

This was on a project as stated by both Horey and Flexner and by Hether Hailey (see letter Hay 22, 1935). The two young scholars had been engaged in making a survey of the resources of the field of humanism from New York to Machington. Their work will take another year (1935-1936) and the budget should contain the proper assunt of work.

Conducting excavations alone is all right if the excavators is trained to his job, but explaining finds can be terribly superficial and will generally be so unless the scholar in question is imbued with the historical spirit from first to last and thoroughly grounded in his department of history. The bad tendency in archeology over here today is to be attached to a department devoted to the history of art, and

"We are food with a somewhat difficult situation, in 1935-36, relative to the working up of the final publication of the results of the Antioch dig, whose first concession term terminates Dec. 31, 1936. Flexner to Hamus (Cambridge, Mass.) referring to Hamus' letter of July 19, 1935 defining humanities (see memorandum 1930-35, School of Economics & Politics, etc., excerpts from File II-35).

"Your letter of the 19th is not so very far off from what is in my mind in the development of the humanities. For the time being I suspect that the philogical side of the language and literature is pretty well worked out. At any rate it is being done in so many different places that there is no need of our touching it. I have made no comprehensive plans, but I am proceeding, as I have proceded in other schools, by picking up outstanding xix individuals when they have become available.

"Only two appointments have been made: one in the field of art and in the field of archeology. During the two years at Princeton I have had the privilege from time to time of seeing Panofsky, who had been dropped from the University of Hamburg and given a temporary appointment in New York University while living in Princeton and giving an occasional lecture there. He is a Kunst Historiker of the highest calibre with a marvelous acquaintance with history and literature in almost every imaginable field. I know that the Harvard people would have been glad to have him if they could have done so, and I have had very cordial expressions of congratuations from the Mogg Museum folks.

"The other appointment is that of a young Hellanist in the middle thirties, who, unless I missed my guess, is destined to contribute largely to the rewriting of ancient history. Archeology is indeed as alive as physics. The excavations going on in the Agora at Antioch and Persepolis and in the Hile valley are going to make it possible to reconceive the whole history of civilisation. This next autumn Heritt will spend not in Princeton but partly in Oxford and Athens where he has already spent several years. He comes to us from the Johns Hopkins where he has been filling the chair left vacant by the retirement and death of Gildersleeve.

"You see I have made a beginning in two of the subdivisions which you have mentioned, and as our resources increase, I shall go forward further. Education, one of the subjects which has been in my mind, not in the technical sense in which it is pursued at Teacher's Colleges of the Harvard School, but in the philosophical and historical sense; but doing scmething in this field depends upon finding a man and having the money."

The Director reports that he has conferred with the Executive Committee and was authorized to increase the estimated expenditures from $250,000 to $265,000 for the purpose of offering Professor E. A.Lowe, greatest of living latin paleographers, now professor at the University of Oxford, a professorship at the Institute. The biographical sketch states that Lowe is an American by birth but has received education abroad. Lowe has accepted. The Carnegie Institution at Washington is willing to make a substantial appropriation toward his expenses. The librarian of the Morgan Library, Miss Belle Greene, has volunteered to put treasures of the Morgan Library at Lowess disposal.

Lowe is preparing an important work ultimately to be issued by the Clarendon Press in 10 volumes, two of which have been published. The Clarendon Press is contributing one-third toward the total cost and the remainder of the money needed has been secured and is now in the hands of the Clarendon Press.

Also the Director recommends that a professorship should be offered to W. A. Campbell who has been field director of the excavations at Antioch and who through Professor Morey of Princeton University the Director understands is available. A graduate of Dartmouth, master of find arts, magna cum laude in Princeton in 1930.

He has performed distinguished excavation work at Corinth and at Athens. He was a Carnegie Fellow at Princeton, he belongs to the same class as Professor Meritt and is most promising.

Also the Emergency Committee in the Aid of Displaced Foreign Scholars is willing to supply $2000 toward the salary of Professor Ernst Herzfeld in order to permit the Institute to offer him a professorship in the School of Humanistic Studies. Herzfeld is recognized as the foremost scholar in the field of Islamic Archeology of present day and one of the explorers in the field of Persian Archeology. He has extraordinary command of both the languages involved and also of the archeology and field methods.

Herzfelds' library, himself and his immense materials in preparation for publication are all at the present unlocated so that the setting of this great scholar in some place where he can finish his work in the course of the next ten years would seem to be a great contribution.

Professor Lowe was appointed professor of humanistic studies effective July 1, 1936 at $10,000 with the usual provisions for pension. Professor W. A. Campbell was appointed professor of humanistic studies effective July 1, 1936 at $6,000 with the usual provisions for pension.

Professor Ernst Herzfeld was appointed a professor of humanistic studies effective July 1, 1936 at $4,000, one-half of which was to supplied for the year 1936-1937 by the Emergency Committee in the Aid of Displaced Foreign Scholars, with the

The Director reports to the Board that Professor Alexander has been invited to lecture at the University of Cambridge during the summer and Professor von Neumann at the University of Paris. Professor Meritt "our young humanist" has been lecturing with distinguished success at Oxford during the past few months. The British Museum in London, the Bodleian Library at Oxford and the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge have shown him unexampled kindness in giving him the opportunity to copy without charge the precious materials which they and they alone contain.

He also refers to Meritt's enormous collection of archeological materials in Athens which he has brought to Princeton for study.

The Director cites an official document issued by the University of Oxford dated Nov. 25, 1935: "The present time is opportune for making this first installment of the desired equipment of the projected addition to the Ashmolean Museum because Dr. Benjamin D. Meritt who has been giwing instruction in epigraphy this term is about to provide for the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, New Jersey a similar set of squeezes from the National Museum at Athens and has kindly undertaken to assist in supervising the provision of a duplicate set for Oxford...this is an exceptional opportunity for supplying the needs for a working equipment for advanced study in epigraphy at Oxford." (Minutes 1/27/36, pp. 7 & 8)

Wyou will, perhaps, remember that a good many years ago, you were kind enough to arrangeme for me to meet the late Prof. Breasted. Our meeting took place on the platform of a train in the Grand Central Station and although it was very brief, it was long enough for an interesting exchange of ideas. He told me then that he hoped sometime to excavate a site at which the Hittite civilization met the Greek and that if he did so, he would like to call upon me to head the undertaking. His intention, which remained unfulfilled has now actually been fulfilled by our work at Tarsus. For we found this year a sealed deposit in which there were both Hittite royal seals, a Hittite royal deed and Mycenaean pottery, much of which was imported from the Greek mainland. This is what archaeologists have been eagerly expecting of Tarsus and I think on the whole that it represents the most significant contribution of the 1936 campaign."

She informs Flexnen, "When my Father decided no longer to make his gift through Harvard University, I urged him to come forward and make it personally. As all such enterprises must be supported by individuals of means, I saw no reason why he should not be known as part-supporter of mywork. He has, however, always shunned publicity and so, without

This...seemed to me appropriate that the Institute at which I am professor should be connected with what is and will remain for a number of years my chief interest and occupation. It is true that my Father stipulated that his name should not be mentioned, but I feel quite sure that he made no stipulation that the connection of the Institute with Tarsus should remain equally anonymous."

She notes also that the grant to Miss Day for study at Tarsus Islamic ceramics was made before she left Princeton, and though other holders of grants are specifically mentioned, her appointment too wax is passed over. Flexner to Goldman, June 30, 19381

In reply to her letter of May 3, 1938, on the attribution to the Institute of her excavations at Tarsus. "I do not know precisely how to reply to your subsequent letter of May 3, to which Mrs. Bailey replied on May 18. Nothing would have given me more pleasure than to make any reference to your father or Tarsus that would please you and him, but he himself insisted on anonymity and therefore let me, as I thought, no alternative. As to an account of your work at Tarsus, I said nothing because you yourself, in reply to my request for a statement for the bulletin, made no specific mention of Tarsus. As Mrs. Bailey indicated, the annual bulletin is meant to be a modest statement by the professors themselves of what they are doing or planning. My part is wholly editorial, and even my editorial work is limited to piecing together the fragmentary statements which I receive in answer to my inquiries. I cannot therefore feel that I am in any wise responsible for the omission of a specific reference to Tarsus, though I think it is a pity that no such reference was made."

Transmits copy of a letter from President Park, Bryn Mawr to Goldman dated November 29, 1938, informing Miss Goldman that Bryn Mawr will not be able to make good on its commitment of $2500 for next year's excavations at Tarsus, and may be able to clear off "this year's indebtedness of $1600." She outlines a long course of woes giving the reason why Bryn Mawr manke must withdraw from its commitment. Miss Goldman expresses the opinion to Flexner that while she has become "almost shock-proof in these matters" she really is amazed at the letter. Flexner replies that, "somehow I cannot believe that Bryn Mawr is unable to live up to a modest engagement of the kind undertaken in reference to this excavation."

Flexmer informed Morey on Outober 7, 1939, of his resignation. (See Morey's letter not in this file), and thereafter on Movember 20 which Morey asked whether Aydelotte, Flexmer, Panofsky, and himself were to have a conference in the near future in the interests of Princeton's departmental recommendations. (November 20, 1939). But Flexmer hadgone south, and thereafter December 15, Aydelotte said he had studied the budget and regretted that it would not be possible to make financial provision for Capps for second half of the academic year 1939-40, though he hoped it would be possible to give it in the budget for the second term of the next academic year. He promised information later. Morey followed up on December 18 with a request for specific information about Campbell and Stillwell, saying that the Institute contemplated carrying the men for Antich and the publication of its results part time while Wellesly, in the case of Campbell, and Frinceton, in the case of Stillwell, made up the other half. There was only an informal and unwritten agreement regarding Stillwell, and he is apprehensive.

Meanwhile, apparently the Carnegie Corporation delayed on its part of the subvention (See note E. S. B., April 25).

On May 18, 1940, (Ibid.) Aydelotte informed Morey that the list for stipends in the School of Humanistic Studies for the next academic year would be: Bernheimer, Capps Jr., de Tolnay, Downey, Frankl, Hoey, Holland, Raubitschek, Starr, Skikkmaik (Guggenheim Fellowship), Stillwell, Tedesco. Unable to find a stipend for Professor Ward. Aydelotte said he was writing a letter "in order that you may have a written memorandum since I feel that these individuals are as much your appointments as ours." Morey replied with thanks, and acknowledged a telephone communication that Downey's salary had been raised to £2100 by the Institute.

On March 31, 1941, Morey said Panefsky had informed him that Panefsky said the Institute was considering increasing the stipend for de Tolnay at the Institute, and Morey supports any such action, saying that de Tolnay's work has been of excellent quality, and his drawings of Michelangelo should be a very fine thing for the Institute to sponsor. Also de Tolnay Essues needs another year or two of Americanization at the Institute before he goes out into the academic world. "It is difficult to become proficient in American English if you have a charming wife who speaks only Italian."

Aydelotte to Morey, April 5, (Ibid) enclosing for Horey's confidential information a report which he had made to the Board of Trustees on the School of Economics! He was preparing a similar report on the School of Humanistic Studies using meterial furnished him by the various members of the humanistic group. "You have played so large a part in our work that I should be most grateful for any notes which you could furnish me on short notice about the work being done, its relation to Frim eton University, and especially about the work of the Antioch excavations."

He wants the information by April 7. Morey complied on April 10, and Aydelotte acknowledged its ying that he could not possibly have got the kind of information Morey X gave him from the members of the Institute faculty, and was gratified that Morey found the contribution of the Institute professors to the University valuable. "...I hasten to assure you that I depend greatly on your advice and assistance in the general organization and direction of our work.

Aydelotte to Flexner, January 20, 1940.

Asks Flexner if the Institute is committed for the three years 1939-42 to Campbell and Stillwell. If the Institute is, we must fulfill the obligation, but since they cannot pursue the escavations at Antioch in war-time perhaps Campbell should go back to full-time teaching at Wellesley and Stillwell to Princeton, thus interrupting our contributions until it is possible for the excavations to go forward. If the funds of the Institute are used up, and the excavations are not done, Morey will have to find funds elsewhere to carry on the actual work for which the Institute's pledge was made.

Aydelotte suggests instead of carrying on the men half-time a cash contribution of $5,000 per year for the two years 1940-42, leaving it to Morey how he spendsit. He is not speaking to Morey until Flexner informs him.

He raises another question about Capps. Capps' wife was very ill two or three/years ago, and he began was spending most of his time at home. Since her death he has spent very little time at the Institute, "so that our payment to him becomes largely a pension." Great as he is in American classicism, Aydelotte does not think this situation is warranted.

Flexmer's letter is not in the file answering this.

Unsigned ribbon & copy of memorandum directed to the Director from the faculty of the School of Humanistic Studies, April 18, 1941.

"The Institute as we of the humanist faculty understand it, was designed primarily as a center for research where a scholar could devote all his time to the pursuit of his particular investigation, undisturbed by administrative duties and unhampered by teaching, except of pupils of his own choice." Granting that methods of research and work are individual and are so-recognized, it is essential that professors have the means "for inviting suitable young assistants to collaborate with us and mature colleagues with whom to exchange ideas. This is perhaps the most fruitful use to which our infin Institute can be put. The second way of proving his usefulness is by publication; for this it is necessary to have the appropriate means."

School of Humanistic Studies must have enough managements money for funds to invite asistants and members and to publish.

Another question of Institute policy: Meritt, Lowe, Hersfeld have had to spend years and money collecting their particular libraries of material. Whitestheshistory affine while it is a known fact that the study of the history of fine arts is adequately supported and well represented in our universities and colleges, research in prehistoric archaeology and driental culture, and as well as in epigraphy and paleography, have only a precarious footing In our larger universities and are utterly neglected in our colleges. Yet the latter two subjects forms the very foundation for other fields of study and are therefore basic. / The question of policy, then, is this: should the Institute consciously strive to be a real center for these fundamental and specialized subjects and plan for their continuation when the present incumbents of these chairs are no longer in the Institute?"

The memorandum them likens the potential position of the Institute in future as the sheltering place for learning as was Wonte Cassino in its shelter in the critical fifth century. Hit gart, morning & Pan plantiment during Flyneis regine

Nelson Glueck, American School of Oriental Research, Jerusalem, Palestine, to Hetty Goldman.

An appraisal of William F. Albright of the Johns Hopkins University—one of the greatest living scholars in the entire general field of Near Eastern Oriental studies and archaeology; One of the greatest scholars that has ever labored in this field; one of the greatest scholars in Semitic philology that western civilization has had. In Assyrian, Babylonian, Ungaritic, Hebrew and Egyptian studies he has made pronounced and invaluable contributions. The list of his publications in these fields would cover literally hundreds of titles. He has been a great Palestinian archaeologist. He excavated at Tell Beit Mirsim, but he has been more than a Palestinian archaeologist. "He has known how to synthesize the results of archaeological and historical investigation in all the lands bordering Palestine. And he has been able to synthesize those results also as an historian of great ability. He has trained a whole school of younger scholars, imparting to each of them a love for science, a passion for exactitude and thoroughness, and a painstaking methodolody. His influence on Near Eastern staides in their narrowest and broadest interpretations will live long after him through the scholars he has trained."

He is a man of large sympathies, keen humor, great generosity.
