Hotes have not been taken on the source given below, but the file has been marked as to pertinent correspondence in their long, and somewhat bitter relationship.

There seems little doubt that Flexner had a fatherly and, therefore, somewhat overbearing attitude toward Mitrany, and that maxistrast his influence was not conducive to productive work by Mitrany, since Mitrany became aware of hostility. Apparently, part of this hostility derived from the fact that Mitrany's sponsor, Frankfurter, was dropped from the Board of Trustees; and that during his tenure on the Board, he took Flexner down the line on a couple of occasions in a high-handed fashion.

It is Mitrany's own doubts as to what he should do in fulfilling his function at the Institute which in part conduced to the bad relationship. It seems apparent, as on reads the correspondence, that Flexner lost confidence in Mitrany's ability as a scholar to perform research and deliver results in his field of political science.

As Flexner realized, and said to Hitrany, this was largely due, or partly due in any event, to the fact that Mitrany's heart was divided as between the United States and England. Mitrany was prepared, asparently, to come to this country when his wife's illness which was mental caused him to remain longer in England, and, undoubtedly, sated to make it more is difficult for him to collect his thoughts and proceed on a serious piece of research and work. This illness lasted into 1938 from about 1934, and at no time did Mitrany feel that he could spend a great deal of time in this country. As a matter of fact, the correspondence does not render it certain that except at one time, about 1937, he ever decided to become an American and to operate in America. While he endeavored to find his way with Flexner in the early part of 1938, Munich occurred, and he stayed during the "crisis" which took him up into September of 1939: whereafter, he engaged in work for the British Government in connection with the war, and did not come. Flammer to Mitrany, October 22, 1935.

During their contreversy over Mitrany's work for the Institute, and the question of whether or not he should dome to this country, Frankfurter is dropped from the Soard of Trustees by a failure of the committee to renominate him. Witrany brings this up to Plexner, and Marner replies in this letter.

He says that the fact that Pelix is no longer a member of the Board of Trustess, should have no bearing whatever on his and Mitrany's controversy over Mitrany's activities as a professor in the School of Boansmion and Politics. Flexner tells Mitrany that Frankfurter's views differed on some important matters from Those of a majority of the Board but said that this, itself was not a reason why he was not always in total agreement.

"You will naturally the nesk why he was emitted. It was purely and entirely a question of his conduct. He did things in violation of the confidential nature of his position. On hearing of one of them, I wrote him a hasty and engry letter, for which I asked Fresident Aydelotte to apologise. I should not have written it."

He then says that he kept away from the meeting of the Committee on Mominations, and he also asked Apdelotte not to tell him what transpired between Frankfurter and himself on a trip which Aydelotte made to Combridge at the request of the committee. The committee's report omitting Frankfurter's name was unanimous. The matter was discussed freely and fully without feeling by the Board. Flamer says he did not contribute to the discussion.

"You will see therefore that no question of freedom of opinion is or was involved at any stage. The decision was taken first by the Committee and then by the Board solely on the question as to how members of the Board must comport themselves outside Board meetings, if the high level which we have succeeded in cetabliching is to be maintained."

He cautions Earle on wanting to get to work too soon. "Both Riefler and I want your help and advice, and we both mean to visit you at your convenience but we are ourselves a bit at sea as to the work we want to do; and there doesn't seem much to chose between being at sea in Princeton or in Saranac. I also suspect that you are allowing your conscience to worry you because you are not on the job, but you know that Dr. Flexner does not hustle any of us; it might comfort you to know that he offered me to stay on in England for the time being, where my wife is ill, and if I did not make use of his generous offer it was simply because, apart from sentimental comfort, my presence could contribute nothing to the treatment which my wife is undergoing. So I hope you will put everything into the one job of getting your health back, and in the meantime not worry about other things ...

"you know how hospitable people are here, and so far there has been everyday some dinner or lunch or tea party, which is more than I can usually digest - in more than one sense. But for the sake of the Institute I am being very good and polite, though I should soon break out in a rash if it lasts much longer. Most of it is sheer waste. There are enough people in the Institute and around it to fill one's life and leisure pleasantly and instructively, without running around in wider circles... At present we at the Institute are a bit like a zoo, being shown off to provide a little thrill for the tame Princeton group of faculty ladies. But it won't last long and we shall survive...

"...we have plenty of time to spare, as we have not yet embarked upon any definite work. So I hope you will make use of me - and I am sure that Biefler would make the same offer - for anything we might be able to do in connection with your reading etc."

He makes the most complimentary remarks to Mrs. Earle and her activities and particularly her care in letting him blow off steam at her home.

EARLE, E. M.

Flexner to Earle, June 6, 1936.

A long letter describing a farewell visit from "our mutual friend," Mitrany. Flexner got him to discuss what his gripes were toward Flexner.

- (1) Early in his connection with the Institute, Mitrany recommended that Ginzberg of the London School be invited to lecture at Princeton. The proposition was turned down. As Flexner remembers by his saying that there wasn't anybody to lecture to. That wasn't the way the Institute was functioning, at least as far as the experience of the School of Mathematics was concerned at that time.
- (2) Mitrany: "I had a feeling that you regard me as inferior." Flexner gave him a little lesson in psychology. Everybody feels inferior to somebody. However, Flexner went on as fixed follows, "You and Ed Barle are the only persons in the Institute who were my warm friends personal friends before the Institute was started. Earle and I have been closer in friendship and happier with one another since the Institute was started, whereas you and I have drifted apart. Now maybethe fault instead of being mine is yours, though if it is mine and you can put your finger on it all you have to do is tell me and I will treat you precisely as I treated [somebody else who got a feeling of inferiority]."

Finally he convinced Mitrany that he was right.

To Earle: "I am writing you this in great confidence because knowledge of it may help you next year, and I shall keep a copy to show to win in the autumn. I hope sincerely that we will never hear of it again and that if Frankfurter or Laski tries to undermine his confidence he will have sense enough to show them up."

Those letters begin in this file in February, 1936, and continue through; although Earle appeared for the spring session in 1938.

Plexner to Earle, January 4, 1938.

They had had a conversation and Flexner writes after reviewing the conversation in his mind.

(1) He advises Earle to demonstrate that you are, as I know you are and as you know you are, a well man, so that all rumor and talk about your previous disability will forever disappear... not the slightest psychosis of illness...maintaining the same sort of outward appearance, as far as the world is concerned, as is maintained by your associates. One unbroken, normal year of that kind will dispose of whatsoever remains of concern for you, for I am not concerned and I do not believe there is the skgik slightest ground for concern as to your physical welfare. We cannot advertise it, but we can replace it."

"It was really a great pleasure to have a candid talk with you yesterday, and there is, as you know, absolutely no reason why anyone in the Institute should not cultivate the same sort of relationship with me. I shall no more interfere with one school than I have interfered with the mathematicians. I have, I believe, absolutely lived up to the ideal with which we started, namely, that the schools should be as nearly as possible 'autonomous' - see Bulletin 2, page 3. Now let us see whether the faculty can live up to its part, which is stated on the same page in the same bulletin.

He has seen Mitrany. He doesn't know whether Mitrany's theory that the south in the United States is like the Balkans will work out or not, but a good part of their awkwardness has disappeared since Flexner got Mitrany to talk about what was eating him. In the first place, he thinks the thing that is eating him is that his wife is ill, and he is not satisfied with the medical treatment, but he does say to Mitrany, and he quotes it to Earle, Mitrany and Ed Earle "are the only persons in the Institute who xxxxxxx were my warm personal friends before the Institute was started."

Earle starts making plans vigorously which he writes to Flexner in a letter dated December 30, 1937; to bring Langer from Harvard, Bailey from Stanford, Sprout from the Political Science Department at Frinceton, etc. Also he is publishing an article in The Political Science Quarterly in March by Earle, the substance of which he had sent to Flexner originally as a typewritten meso and which will appear under the name, American Military Policy and Matichal Security.

Flowner's letter to Earle of January 4, 1938, indicates there was some kind of an upset when they met on the afternoon of January 3 and had a long discussion. First Plexner undertakes to tell himshat Earle that it is not his place to invite scholars from other universities directly; that Flowmer is very careful of protocol in this matter, and must be informed so that he may make the appropriate approach to the President of the university.

He deprecates the talk which Earle had with Grane of the Social Science Research Common about a crisis, and points out delicately that Earle is a scholar and not a journalist. Invites Earle to sit down with him and discuss what they can do. "We have no responsibility for action, but we have enormous responsibility for ascertaining facts and seeing to it that they are made available."

"I think the considerations which I have mentioned above ought to govern the form and spirit in which your article is re-written for the Political Science Quarterly." You should be a scholar - not thank an advocate.

Pleaner goes on to reessert his feth in autonomous schools. "Now let us me whether the faculty can live up to its part, which is stated on the same page in the same bulletin (page 3, Bulletin 2). This little excitement in reference to Mitrany may have served a good purpose of it benishes once and for all the thought of any fundamentalchanges for the next twenty-five years. Meanwhile, if the Institute fails it will not fail because of the Board of Trustees; it will fail because the men chosen to be professors have not been equal to their opportunities, for they have their fate in their own hands in your department and in the humanistic department, as they have in the mathematical department."

Earle, January 26, 1938, sends to Dear Abe the copy of his recast article for the Political Science Quarterly. His letter of transmittal is exceedingly formal.

Mitrany, in my judgment—and I say this in confidence to you—has made a great mistake by spending six months in America and six months in England. He will never learn political theory or practice in America as long as he continues to do this. The same would hold of Clay."

Then there is a histus in the coprespondence. In 1939, October 18, Earle writes to Flexner, seeking to explain his deeply involved feelings about Flexner's resignation, and on the next day, October 19, 1939, Flexner signs off the friendship. He has heard that the Rockefeller Foundation may be about ti give the Institute a large amount of money, and he warns against it saying that The London School of Economics was "utterly deflected from its original character and purpose by a sudden influx of money; I have seen perfectly good professors become academic propagandists by a surfeit of endowed 'research'; and I do not mind telling you, knowing that it will not go further, that the best group at M the School have come to the conclusion that the Rockefeller money has been a disaster for the School and its scientific standing."

Mitrany to Aydelotte, December 2, 1939.

Asks Aydelotte personally whether he should return to America or stay in Britain which is at war. He says the British authorities were anxious (confidential information) that people like myself with contacts in America should return there at once.

But Mitrany has taken only his first papers for citizenship in America, and is still, legally, therefore, a British citizen. He is doing work for the government which consists of a weekly reports on various countries affected by the war from newspapers and information accessible to the group with tak which he is working, and he is desirous of continuing. He also has personal factors which make him desire to remain in Britain. He is also keeping up with things in America, as he said, sharing a house with Professor Chamberlin of Columbia, Eastman visiting professor, and manages to see something of the American students here.

Aydel otte to Mitrany, December 19, 1939.

He believes Mitrany could reasonably request leave for another term and can return to Princeton in September of 1940 -- not an official demand, but only his personal opinion.

He says that 12 research committees have been set up at Chatham

I may say again that I find that the theoretical work which I was trying to push forward when I left is useful now, and it is most distracting that I kawa had not had the chance to finish it."

He transmits a copy of a letter to him from Toynbee dated September 10, 1940, admitting that is it is natural that the Institute would like to have Mitrany back. "But I can only say that if, unfortunately, you had to leave us now, the research work that the

"This research work has...been put in hand exclusively for the government use and has been planned in consultation with the authorities so as to be of direct practical value to them—not unlike Professor Earle's committee at Princeton. MEMORANDUM FOR MEMBERS OF THE SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS AND POLITICS:

I had several conversations with Mitrany while I was in England and must now make a recommendation to the Trustees on May 23rd as to his status. I told Mitrany that we felt that his leave of absence must end this year and that he should either return to the Institute in September 1946 or resign.

Mitrany is extremely loathe to accept either alternative. He is occupied at the moment with interesting and important work and his family situation makes it very difficult for him to leave England. On the other hand he would like to keep a connection with the Institute and if possible return here a year or two hence to spend the last five years before he is sixty-five, writing a book which would be a kind of distillation of all his practical experience in international affairs during the war and post-war period. Mitrany would accept almost any status that we thought it right to assign to him. He would also make an effort to come into residence in Princeton for the second half of the year 1946-1947 if we thought that advisable.

I said to Mitrany that I could not go beyond the statement which I have quoted in my first paragraph but that I would discuss the whole matter with the School of Economics and Politics and with the Board of Trustees at the Annual Meeting in May.

FRANK AYDELOTTE

RECOMMENDATION TO THE FACULTY:

The Director reported that he had said to Professor Mitrany that it was the feeling of the Board and Faculty that he should either return to the Institute in September, 1946 or relinquish his position.

Professor Mitrany finds it very difficult to return to Princeton at the present time on account of the very unusual opportunities which he has of participating in the discussion of international questions in connection with his work for Lever Brothers and also because of his domestic situation at home. Professor Mitrany realizes that if he is not to return, the School of Economics and Politics would like to have his position declared vacant so that another appointment could be made. He has raised the question whether any connection with the Institute could be established which would make possible another appointment and which at the same time would continue his relationship to the Institute. He thinks that he might want to return two or three years hence for a period of continuous research and writing up to the age of sixty-five.

The Director and the School of Economics and Politics considered the whole question sympathetically and recommend that Professor Mitrany should be given permanent membership in the Institute without stipend except when he is in residence, this membership to continue up to the age of sixty-five; that the Institute should continue to make its payments to the TIAA on the same basis as heretofore, provided that Professor Mitrany matches these payments; that Professor Mitrany should undertake to spend a few weeks at the Institute during term time each year that he is not in residence at his own expense; that Professor Mitrany's professorship should thus be vacated so that another appointment can be made at a suitable time.

If Professor Mitrany finds it possible to spend some years in continuous residence at the Institute, it is expected that the School of Economics and Politics will recommend a suitable stipend and that the Trustees will enlarge the regular stipend fund of the School of Economics and Politics to cover this amount.

It is the belief of the School of Economics and Politics that this arrangement while unusual will have real value for the School as well as for Professor Mitrany. The School would have in effect an outpost in England and every effort would be made to get the maximum value in discussions and research from the annual visits contemplated under this arrangement.

12th June, 1946

Dear Aydelotte:

Your kind letter of May 24th has done a great deal to mitigate my regret for the decision which I had to make at present. You, the Trustees and my colleagues in the School of Economics and Politics, I am fully aware, have dealt in a very friendly and understanding way with my problem, and the arrangement which you suggest is very pleasing to me. My main desire was to keep an active connection with the Institute, and my colleagues' and your decisions make this possible in a way which does not hamper your own arrangements at the Institute, which you know I also had much at heart.

At the moment I only want to assure you that, unless disaster overwhelms us, I do not intend to delay the scholarly work of which I spoke to you and which means everything to me. I would much prefer to live in modest circumstances and do that work than accept conditions which would hamper it. I very much hope that I shall have your friendly help and encouragement even when you retire from the Institute.

Thank you also for taking such a friendly interest in the financial aspect. It is quite clear that the Institute will have no direct obligation towards me after July of this year. At the same time I should be very grateful if, as you suggest, the Institute could for the time being continue to make whatever payments are due to the Teachers Annuity Association and also for my Massachusetts Insurance, as they have dome hitherto and on the present basis. We are still not allowed to make remittances except with a special permit for each individual case, and the whole thing is too complicated to straighten out by correspondence. It would be a real help therefore if the Institute would kindly keep these things going until I come over later in the year, when I will have a chance to make new arrangements and will refund whatever sums the Institute has paid on my behalf.

Would you please thank the Trustees and my colleagues for their good will and tell them how delighted I am that I can remain one of their group. I know what the whole arrangement owes to your own personal goodwill and effort.

Always sincerely yours,

D. MITRANY

Professor David Mitrany Unilever House Blackfriars London, E.C.h., England

Dear Mitrany:

Warmest thanks for your letter of June 12th. Certainly you could not possibly feel greater pleasure at this continuation of your connection with the Institute than I do myself. I shall have retired before you return for any extended work here but the Trustees have kindly offered to give me offices in Fuld Hall and I shall expect to be here daily. The only difference will be that I shall then be carrying only two jobs instead of three.

I hasten to say that the Institute will be glad to carry on the payments to the TIAA, leaving it to you to make repayment when transfer of funds from England becomes feasible. You may decide to make the payments regularly through the Institute until you are 65 instead of making them directly to the TIAA. That will be absolutely as you prefer. I am asking Miss Miller also to take care of the Massachusetts insurance.

I am glad to read what you say about getting on with work on your book at the earliest possible moment. You have had a wonderful experience and you ought to distill it into some permanent form before too long.

Let me repeat in closing how pleased I am that the whole matter is permanently settled.

With kindest regards, I am

Yours sincerely,

Frank Aydelotte
