Dr. Appenheimer has seen about 5 men.

He liked Bradley the Bradley's experience seems more appropriate — He

Gentlemen:

I have written to Princeton University in an effort to trace Mr. Aaron Bradburg (or Bradberg.) I was advised to communicate with you.

Mr. Bradburg was last known to be with the United States Army in Australia, and at present I have news for his family that would be important. From information I have been able to get, I think that he may have taken courses in mathematics under Professor Einstein within the past five years.

Would it be possible for you to check your records and let me know if Mr. Bradburg was registered with you and whether you could give me his address at that time? Your cooperation will be very much appreciated.

A stamped addressed envelope is enclosed for your convenience.

FACULTY OF POLITICAL SCIENCE

January 15, 1941

My dear Dr. Aydelotte:

I am greatly impressed with the work Professor Robert Brady, an economist at the University of California in Berkeley, is doing. This letter is just a shot in the dark to call him to your attention in case his work is of a sort that might usefully be added to the program of the Institute for Advanced Study.

Brady is in the midst of preparing a two-volume study on the problems connected with economic planning. He has spent a year or so abroad studying German industry and has published a study of "The Rationalization Movement in German Industry." He has the most copious materials on and the surest grasp of the problems of economic centralization in Germany, France, England, Japan and the United States that I have encountered anywhere. The large study he is writing will be of great importance in guiding American experience as we move toward what appears to be an inevitable increase in industrial centralization.

Professor Brady is teaching in the Columbia graduate department of economics this year, on leave from California. His purpose in coming East was to be nearer to essential materials he requires on his study. My purpose in writing you is to raise the possibility of your Institute's keeping him in the East for one or two years more while he completes his study. I am taking the liberty of suggesting to Brady that he write you. Please do not bother to answer this letter of mine, as your answer to his letter will cover the situation.

Truly yours

Robert S Lynd

SEATTLE 4, WASHINGTON

IN REPLY
REFER TO:

1519 SOUTH ALASKAN WAY

5 March 1946

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Lieutenant Colonel (then Major) William Bradley served under my command at the Seattle Port of Embarkation and at the Portland Sub-Port of Embarkation from 1943 to 1945.

While at the Seattle Port of Embarkation Colonel Bradley performed various duties in the Marine Operations Branch and for a time he was Officer in Charge of the Maintenance and Repair Branch. He supervised and directed the upkeep, maintenance and repair of port equipment used in the daily operation of that facility.

Later Colonel Bradley served as Superintendent of the Water Division, Portland Sub-Port of Embarkation and was responsible for the inspection, unloading and loading of all vessels arriving at that installation. It was his duty to see that ships were kept in proper repair and in condition to receive and handle troops and cargo.

Colonel Bradley performed his duties in a highly satisfactory manner, and it was with regret that we permitted him to leave the service when he became eligible for discharge.

Colonel Bradley enjoyed an excellent reputation while serving under my command and I would be glad to have him with me again.

Miss Esther S. Bailey, Secretary,

Princeton, New Jersey

Dear Miss Bailey:

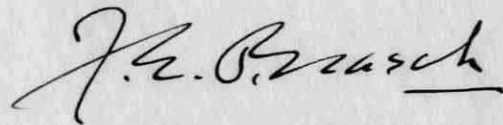

In order to introduce myself I will say that I have had numerous communications with you during the period in which I was Secretary of the History of Science Society. I am now, however, coming to you on a personal matter.

The enclosed is a copy of my studies in which I have been interested for many years. I am now compiling a complete bibliography of the writings by and on Sir Isaac Newton, taking on where Gray left off in 1907. At the same time I am building a collection of material on this great scholar and I am happy to say that it is probably the largest Newtoniana Collection in the United States. I am therefore asking for assistance on your part.

Some years ago I wrote Dr. Albert Einstein for a number of reprints of his bearing upon the subject of Relativity and Celestial Mechanics. I have never heard from him which is doubtless due to the fact that he receives a great deal of correspondence and cannot be bothered. Therefore would it be possible for you to intercede in my behalf? Would it be possible for me to send you a list of them as taken from Hermann Weyl's bibliography of Einstein's writings?

Thanking you for your kind cooperation, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

September 20, 1940

Dear Dr. Bratter:

I sympathize deeply with you in the position in which you find yourself, but in view of the difficulties, both legal and financial, in the way of bringing your family to the United States, my advice would be that you concentrate upon trying to change your temporary visa for Brazil into a permanent one. You have been there two years, you know the country, and it would seem to me that the arguments are all in favor of trying to make your career in Brazil rather than to begin anew a career in this country. My impression is that by persistence you ought to be able to induce the Brazilian authorities to give you a permanent visa.

Director of the Institute

Princeton, N.J.

Dear Sir;

By the present letter I beg to apply to you for advice. Kindly excuse my addressing you but I do not know anybody in the United States and being in very a difficult situation I am compelled to submit my petition to persons I am unknown to.

I am an Austrian and had to leave my home country after the "Anschluss." By special permission of the Brazilian Foreign Office I got a visa but only a temporary one and in December 1938 I arrived with wife and child in Rio. Until to day I could not change my temporary visa into a permanent one and in spite of the fact that I am staying here since nearly 2 years I am not legalized and that means that I am not allowed to accept paid work. This is the one reason that renders my staying here so difficult and the other reason is the health of my daughter, a little child of four years who can not stand the climate, she fell ill and had jaundice first, then nephritis and finally a kind of syphilis.

These two reasons induced me to try to immigrate to the United States and that is why I am applying to you and this is the favour I beg to ask of you: Can you kindly give me any advice how I could arrange an affidavit or a position, for having the degree of a lawyer's doctorate I can enter the United States even without an affidavit, proving only that I found a position.

If I had an affidavit I could concentrate all my forces in searching for funds for transportation of my family and me to the United States. I touched on this matter in my letter I wrote to the National Coordinating Committee, New-York, but they declared that they could not sign an affidavit. I wrote to the Committee for Catholic Refugees and they answered that they could not provide funds for passage but that perhaps they would be able to arrange an affidavit. I am waiting for the answer to my last letter but I can not get it before the end of September and as I do not know whether the Committee will really help, I am writing to you for an advice to whom I could apply.

If you would be so good as to give me your assistance I should furnish you all particulars as to previous positions, studies and personal standing.

Please pardon the trouble I cause you by my request and be so good and let me have your answer even in case of refusal. Thanking you very much for your kindness, I am

Most respectfully yours

Dear Dr. Middeldorf:

I have considered very carefully your letter of April 3rd and have consulted members of our Humanistic School who, of course, know a good deal about Dr. Brendel's qualifications. I am sorry to say, however, that his field lies somewhat outside the work that anyone at the Institute is doing at present, and I regret very much that it is impossible for us to consider him for an appointment next year. I earnestly hope that he will find something elsewhere.

Dear Dr. Aydelotte:

I wonder if you are aware of the fact that Dr. Otto Brendel, one of the most distinguished German archaeologists ever to come to this country, will be without a position at the end of this academic year. I suppose I do not need to tell you anything about Dr. Brendel's qualifications and accomplishments. I only wanted to ask you if you know about a way in which his future, at least for a year or two, could be made secure. I was thinking of course of the possibility of his getting a fellowship at the Institute for Advanced Study. Dr. Brendel is working on all kinds of important projects and he would certainly fit beautifully into the framework of your institution.

I should certainly be greatly relieved if I knew that Dr. Brendel would have some chance somewhere for the next year. I am extremely fond of him as a person, and I have the greatest respect for him as a scholar. Please forgive me for this urgent plea, which is caused by a really serious emergency.

Miss Eichelser has given me the letter from Dr. Middeldorf concerning Dr. Otto Brendel. I know Dr. Brendel and his work fairly well. He is quite a brilliant and original scholar and certainly outstanding among the younger men in archaeology. Unfortunately, Dr. Middeldorf is somewhat optimistic when he says "he would certainly fit beautifully into the framework of your institution," as his field, so far as I know, is Roman art, with which none of us here are concerned. I really regret that this is so for Dr. Brendel is a very stimulating scholar.

Dear Sir:

I am graduating on June the twelfth of this year from Washington University in the city of Saint Louis. My degree will be a B. S. in electrical engineering.

Commencing this fall I expect to continue my studies in the graduate field. What field I enter will probably depend more on the facilities of the institution under consideration for handling graduate students than my own viewpoints, which are still somewhat confused.

One factor of importance is that the institution under question be one of the better ones...or one of the best.

I recall reading a book about choosing a college. In this book your Institute of Advanced Study is rated as one of the best, with men who represent the best people in their given field of study serving on the faculty.

If it is convenient for you to do so, I would appreciate your sending a catalogue of information concerning the school...also, what the housing facilities for students is at the present time.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Dr. Aydelotte:

It was exceedingly kind and gracious of you to send me the references to biographical and bibliographical material about Einstein. I am sure that they will supply the information I am seeking, and that they will be an invaluable aid in giving me the background necessary to construct a discerning radio portrait of Professor Einstein.

I thank you very much indeed.

Dear Mrs. Briggs:

I enclose some references to biographical and bibliographical material about Einstein which I hope will give you the information you are seeking. In addition to what I have given, I think it would be worth your while to study the Reader's Guide back as far as 1935 or 1930.

If you have any further questions please feel free to write to me again.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. Brilliant:

Thank you for your card of June 1st. Under separate cover I am sending you a copy of our latest Bulletin which describes the work pursued at the Institute for Advanced Study. As you will see upon reading the Bulletin, the work done at the Institute consists of post-doctorate research. A few seminars and lectures are given each year but no courses in the usual sense of the word are offered. If, upon reading the Bulletin, you have further questions about the work of the Institute, please do not hesitate to write.

Dear John:

I have your letter about Miss Britten whom Booth wants to bring along as an assistant. As a matter of fact I had a letter from Booth himself about the matter last week and enclose copy of a reply which I wrote him under date of November 26th. I sent a copy of this to Miss Blake to hand on to you but apparently you did not get it. I think there is no question that we should encourage Dr. Booth to bring Miss Britten along since she is financed and since he needs her as an assistant in his work. My thought was that we should give her the status of Assistant, not that of Member of the Institute. She does not have a doctor's degree though the fact that she took first class honors in mathematics at the University of London indicates that she has real ability.

Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, Director
Institute for Advanced Study
Princeton, New Jersey

Dear Dr. Oppenheimer:

I am writing to see whether you might be interested in acquiring the Broadman Library of World War I and World War II.

This library grew out of an intense feeling that world wars have no right to exist. I am a life long friend of Dr. Broadman and have watched him begin with a few scrapbooks and go on to one of the most remarkable collections ever accumulated by one individual.

Scholars should be using the library to get at the root causes of world wars so that mankind can be rid of this evil which seems to be reaching epidemic proportions. Plagues, yellow fever and other scourges have been brought under control by painstaking study and scientific analysis of underlying causes. By quite the same methods we have obtained an atomic bomb. Only through the tedious effort of the scholar will we ever solve the problem of war. The answers will not arrive through political debate with its logrolling that ends when a new mistake has been made to correct a previous error.

In the hands of some deeply interested university the library should enable a new group of profound thinkers to give us a modern version of "De Jure Belli ac Pacis" and guide us as did Gentilis, Grotius and those other great scholars who lived more than three centuries ago.

Dr. Broadman does not have the means to make the library available to the public. He and I have discussed the subject from many angles. The library has never been offered for sale. I advised selling it at a reasonable price to some university or foundation as this would give the sponsor complete freedom of action.

Under separate cover I am sending you a small brochure which describes the library in detail. Your comments would be greatly appreciated as I believe this to be a most worthy project which deserves a helping hand.

Very truly yours,

George A. Prochazka

Dear Charles:

I have just returned from a brief trip to Canada and have discussed with Mr. Aydelotte the question of Dr. Broch and his studies on mass psychology in relation to world power.

Some weeks ago I had a long talk with Dr. Broch concerning his project and came to the conclusion that there was no way in which he could fit in to our group here. In fact, I was definitely under the impression that he might handicap in one way or another what we are doing. Partly on personal grounds and partly because of his inability to formulate his ideas in any sort of definitive terms, Dr. Broch would not be an easy colleague. In some institution where he could be given a greater degree of freedom than he could as a member of my group at the Institute, he might be of greater usefulness.

Thank you for your letter of June 28th. It is suggested that you consult the following books for background on relativity: "Relativity. The special and the general theory. A popular exposition. This can probably be had through the Princeton University Press or any dealer. (3) "Relativity, The Special and General Theory"; The American edition was first published by Holt in 1920; and it seems to have been reprinted without changes by Peter Smith in New York. I hope the above will be of help to you.

I do not believe that it is still in print and available.

Dear Sir:

I would be very much obliged if someone at the Institute could tell me exactly the book to buy to read Dr. Einstein's own account of the relativity theory. Among recent books on the subject I have read is Lincoln Barnett's The Universe and Dr. Einstein. In the reading list of this book the author mentions Relativity, The Special and General Theory, published by Holt in 1920, but in the appendix on page 119 he refers to Peter Smith as the publisher, without date of publication. Does this mean that there are different editions, and if so is the Peter Smith edition later and revised? I have read The Evolution of Physics, which Dr. Einstein wrote in collaboration with Dr. Infeld, but what I wish now to study is the book in which Dr. Einstein himself gave his theory to the world.

Spencer Brodney

EXTRACT

U. S. A. An Outline of the Country
by D. W. Brogan
published by Oxford University Press

Advanced research is pursued in special institutions as well as in the great universities. The Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research became, under Dr. Simon Flexner, one of the most famous centres of medical research in the world. The Carnegie Institution in Washington furthers research in physics, biology, and history; and the oldest of all these bodies, the Smithsonian Institution, runs museums, encourages research in anthropology and physics, and aids in the "increase and diffusion of knowledge among mankind". Also in Washington is the Brookings Institute, which specializes in economic and governmental research. The most interesting of all these research centres is that organized at Princeton by Dr. Abraham Flexner (brother of Dr. Simon Flexner). Richly endowed by the Bamberger family, the Institute for Advanced Study is notable for the eminence of its permanent members, Dr. Einstein, Dr. Lowe, the palaeographer, among others, and for the extreme flexibility of its methods. It is not part of Princeton University (although it works in collaboration with it), and it has no fixed programme, no degrees, no organized plan of objectives imposed from above.

Dear Mr. Aydelotte:

Thank you very much for your letter of February 17, 1942.
It will, I am sure, prove very helpful to us.

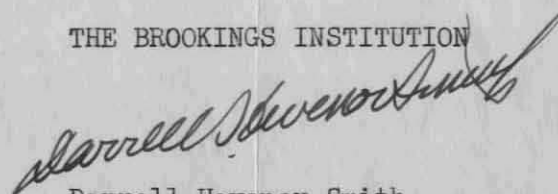

The basic claim of the District of Columbia Corporation Counsel's office is that unless an educational organization performs a function in the District which, if not so performed, would have to be carried on by the District itself, it is taxable. This theory, I imagine, would make you liable to taxation in Princeton.

The contention, if upheld by a court here, might well seep into other jurisdictions affecting every university in the country.

The District definitely states, in a brief, that we perform valuable general and national functions, but dismisses this as inapplicable to the situation.

Sincerely yours,

THE BROOKINGS INSTITUTION

February 17, 1942

Dear Mr. Smith:

The answers to your questions in regard to the Institute for Advanced Study are as follows:

1. We have between fifty and sixty members, as we call our students, chosen from a pretty large list of applicants.

2. It would be impossible to give any definite figure or fraction, but I should say that the members of our faculty, on the whole, spend more time on their own researches than in consultation with students, though these researches are often a joint affair and involve a constant interchange of ideas.

3. Our endowment is a little over $8,000,000 and our investment in land, building, and equipment, including library, is a little less than $1,000,000.

I earnestly hope that you will be able to carry your point as to the identity of education and research. I should be most interested to hear any news of opinions handed down, etc. If there is any further information that I can give you about the Institute for Advanced Study, please do not hesitate to ask me.

My dear Dr. Aydelotte:

Our Institution is involved in a controversy with local tax authorities regarding the exemption of such of our property as is used exclusively for educational purposes from real estate taxation. These authorities attempt to classify research and "education" as distinct and different activities.

In order to present our case as effectively as possible it is desirable for us to point out comparable situations where tax exemption is granted. To this end it would assist us materially if you could supply the following information concerning your Institute for Advanced Study:

1. What is the student registration in, or applying directly to, this school, or building, in a normal academic year?
2. Approximately how much time is devoted by the faculty members concerned to teaching and student consultation and how much to research?
3. What is the approximate investment in physical property of the building or school concerned?

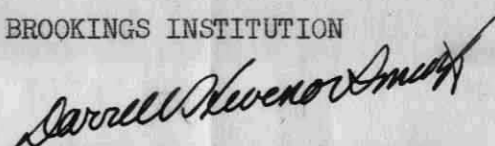

(The question of investment has been raised by the taxing authorities who do not visualize the necessity for a high rate of investment per student in a research-teaching organization.)

We are attempting to gather similar information from other institutions engaged in research and teaching in the social science field.

Your cooperation in supplying us with these data will be greatly appreciated and we trust it is not an imposition to ask that you let us have reply at your earliest convenience.

Dear Mr. Brown:

In reply to your letter of September 29th I wish to express the hope that you will embody your theories in an article for publication in some suitable journal. If you do so, I should be glad to have the article examined by some member of our faculty whose interests lie nearest to yours and report to you his comments. It is our experience that it is practically impossible to communicate the results of scholarly research entirely by word of mouth.

Yours sincerely,

Gentlemen:

Exact social science, with precision and infallible measure in all the social, political, and economic aspects of community life, has been made secure for all time.

This is the direct penetration of human inexperience characteristic of social opinions, political theories, and economic doctrines. Infallible certainty is made clear where we have had opinions. Irrefutable accuracy is achieved where we have had theories. Absolute assurance for all concerned is made secure where we have had only separate group legitimacy, group-domain legality, and the inconsistent and abstract "right" of a chaos of multiple points of view.

Exact social science opens the whole path and patter of correlated human abilities wherever abilities have been divided, and coordinated capacities wherever capacities have been separated, bringing pure democracy in cooperative community enterprise where we have suffered under the principle of DISUNITY with common community standards of DIVISION and SEPARATION.

There is, of course, skepticism toward any announcement of the achievement of exact social science. Skepticism, however, is emotional supposition completely devoid of direct or factual refutation.

There is also prejudice against objective scientific social achievement in a world of strong subjective opinions and theories. Prejudice, however, is imaginative supposition completely removed from any direct or factual evaluation or appraisal.

Man only lays himself open to a perfectly inconsistent DIGNITY if he places any dignity of judgment in superficial skepticism, which holds itself above any need for objective refutation by setting up subjective supposition supreme over direct, factual, and objective study.

Man also lays himself open to a perfectly abstract WISDOM if he places any wisdom of determination in subjective prejudice which holds itself above any need for objective evaluation. I am not concerned with any volume of intensity of skepticism or prejudice, because I have learned that clear objective achievement can reveal the indignity of skepticism and expose the lack of wisdom in prejudice, subjective in nature.

There are many ways to make clear the scientific achievement of exact social science, parallel to the path and pattern of precision determination in the natural sciences.

In the address by Professor Oswald Veblen at the University of Chicago last week he made it clear that -

"Mathematicians, continually inventing newer and more rigorously logical systems, furnish new languages for the interpretation of scientific problems, though often there are long periods between the development of the mathematical system and the discovery of its scientific application."

On the other hand the urgent need of man has been the power -

- (1) to reason ahead to his clear objective,
- (2) to reason the pattern of projective step by step advance in peaceful unity of effort instead of divided domain projective effort competing and conflicting in opinions and theories, and
- (3) to reason the adjustments toward correlated abilities and coordinated capacities above the level of all crime, revolution, or war.

In studies of the June Calahan Foundation here it has been discovered that relativity as it applies to human life approaching its human civilization in principles of democracy and standards of democratic community living, is all made clear in the mathematical aggregate.

This "rigorously logical system" has been little more than a mathematical "exercise", but this mathematical pattern of aggregation all the way to the absolute aggregate, holds the key to the absolute which measures all ~~the~~ unit inconsistencies and group abstractions of community life.

Man, of course, did not have an opportunity to approach the meaning of human civilization in the absolute aggregate. Savage man, before language was established, of necessity had to approach human civilization from the opposite or ignorant end of aggregation as a unit standard in its own dignity and wisdom.

Man had to struggle with unit ignorance of the meaning of human civilization above the level of a civilization with a total population of one. Since language was established so community life could be organized under opinions and theories, man has had to struggle with domain misunderstanding of civilization above the level of tribal organization in self-righteous dignity and legitimacy, with its own self-assuring wisdom and legality, as the basis of human civilizing right.

Now that translation of barbaric languages has been made universal, with great strides toward universal world communication and universal world transportation, we have developed a new social state of world events, world affairs, and world concerns. The old domain patterns of law and order do not fit the world pattern of actual affairs and practical concerns. Only the aggregate in the full clarity of the absolute aggregate, can measure unit (one man) inconsistencies, and measure separate group (any separately organized domain) abstractions.

The measure changes from ⁽¹⁾the dignity of opinion, or ⁽²⁾an organized measure of a volume of uncertain opinions in multiple uncertainty, to ⁽³⁾the measure of aggregate consistency revealing the ignorance in every uncertainty of opinionated dignity.

(1)
The unit of measure changes from ⁽¹⁾the personal unit (one person) and from ⁽²⁾the partial unit (a separate organized group), to ⁽³⁾the impersonal and impartial unit which is the absolute aggregate. With this unit of measurement, the selfish or self-righteous personal unit is pathetic, and the monopoly or abstract assurance of a tribal domain is humorous in its ownership of HUMAN dignity and its possession of HUMAN CIVILIZING wisdom.

It will do no objective good to stand closed minded to established logical mathematical systems which always find application in the solution of scientific problems.

It will do no objective good to stand narrow minded to the discovery of the scientific application of established mathematical consistencies as the solution to problems of inconsistency which had no solution outside of rigorously logical mathematical certainty.

Man has had to struggle to find the key to reasoning, before he could solve the reasoning problems of objective dignity, projective wisdom in step by step advance in the objective direction, and the full relativity of "right" based on an aggregate objective dignity, with its universal projective wisdom.

The direction is made clear by the objective. The distance in that direction is made clear by the pattern of projective achievement. The resulting magnitude is made clear by the full relativity of the achieved objective in the full pattern of its projective workmanship.

The mathematical aggregate provides the full absolute relativity. This gives man a very simple (1) membership in the human race, (2) citizenship in the human civilization of that human race, and (3) partnership in the HUMAN abilities and the CIVILIZING capacities. Community life then becomes a clear correlation of HUMAN abilities and a clear coordination of CIVILIZING capacities in the aggregate respectability and universal acceptability of HUMAN abilities and CIVILIZING capacities in their greatest magnitude of civilized intelligent democracy. The relativity of the aggregate all the way to the absolute, provides the clear human objectivity, and the practical civilizing projectivity. This objectivity, projectivity, and relativity of civilized intelligent democracy as pure democracy, is exact social science.

There is, of course, much more to explain. This is only a basic announcement. I would like to have your interest as objective interest, free from any subjective opinions or theories, willing to see the demonstration of infallible facts, irrefutable evidence, and absolute assurance of proof. I can go to Princeton and provide the whole achievement, giving the entire path and pattern of human reasoning in its teachable dignity and learnable wisdom of impersonal demonstration, and determinations perfectly impartial coming wholly and solely from demonstration. No opinion or theory is involved. I await your pleasure.

Yours very sincerely

Gentlemen:

I wonder if you can assist me in locating Mr. George Brown who graduated from the Advanced Institute in about 1939 or 1940 receiving his degree — Ph.D. in mathematics under Dr. Einstein.

Since Brown is a common name, it may be of further assistance in identifying him if I point out that, according to my recollection, he completed his three years work in two years.

If you do not have his current address, could you give me the most recent address that you do have.

Sincerely,

Dear Frank:

Mr. Brynes has already had the limit of our support, two years, which was granted by the Committee of Selection plus an extra three months which you and I decided to grant him at the end of the two-year period. There is literally nothing in the old reserve of funds for increasing stipends with which to do anything for him; and until we get our Latin American appointments made, we don't know what the reserve for next year will be. Nor have we any authority to do anything with it at the present time.

Any one of these dates would suit Stewart, Warren and myself but Thursday would perhaps be best.

Henry Moe tells me that you have seen a copy of my project for a study of Continental and Anglo-American conceptions of police, and that a group is now being formed (for the discussion of various post-war problems) to whom this angle of approach may be of interest.

I can think of nothing more likely to sharpen my own wits---whatever the weight of my contribution to the proceedings---than membership in such a group.

May I join?

Dear Miss Quimby:

Many thanks for your letter and for this material about Dr. Bunzel, which I am delighted to have. It would help a great deal in placing him if copies of his publications were available in the United States. If he has any friend in Austria who might bring or smuggle them out, I think it would be very much worth doing.

Dr. Bunzel seems to me a man of so much ability and originality as not to fit into any kind of a position in a conventional college or university. The more I think of it the more I believe that Black Mountain College would be the best place for me, and I should almost think it worth while for him to visit Black Mountain in order to get acquainted there and to give the faculty of the college a chance to know him.

Dear Dr. Aydelotte;

Thank you very much for your kind letter of September 21 which accompanied Dr. Bunzel's book outline. He will appreciate your interest in it, I know, although I daresay he will be rather disappointed that you could not be more encouraging regarding possibilities of working with some research foundation. It is indeed a puzzle to determine how his abilities and varied studies and experiences could be made useful in our regular academic work. Lecturing or writing might be the eventual answer but an impractical one for urgent immediacy, probably.

He had asked me to forward to you a copy of the letter which he sent to Houghton Mifflin with the outline. A typist here was making copies of it along with copies of the manuscript and she has just given them to me to send on. It is herewith enclosed and I am adding a sketch of his experience which I have, because it includes a list of his publications, which you mentioned as necessary evidence. Probably none of these are available in this country, however.
Please do not, of course, trouble to return these.

With many good wishes for the work of the Institute, especially in the international field, I am

Sincerely yours,

Dear Sirs:

Enclosed you will find an application and an outline of my proposed book, "Baroque Created America". It seems necessary, however, to add a few remarks.

This book is to be written originally in English. It has not been done before in German, although my occupation with the subject in Vienna dates back as early as 1932. In the last few years, moreover, the work on it was discontinued for very understandable reasons.

My previous work, largely scattered in newspapers and periodicals was concerned with literature, musicology and dance, as well as with purely historical and political matter. The sociological study "6,000 Years of Music" was accepted by the Conservatory of Vienna as a standard text-book and by Gerold and Company for publication. Traveling in Sub-Carpathian Russia enabled me to study and describe minority-group behavior and the Czech democracy at work.

I lectured before academic and non-academic groups on various subjects; on the Baroque only once, in 1936, before the Historic Sociological Seminary.

Scientific theories, however, will not be an intrinsic part of this volume. I do not plan to include the bibliography and footnotes, which might overload the book and give it a too scholarly character. It is my intention to tell the story of the Baroque as the biography of someone underestimated in his influence and implications. Only two charts will be appended: one synchronic, dealing with the facts, the other schematic, dealing with the meaning behind them. Due to the exigencies of every-day life, I have not yet found sufficient time to prepare these charts fully.

In fairness to you, as to my sponsors, I should mention that there are, in this country, many friends, who know of me and of my work, but who may be unable to foretell the outcome of such an enterprise as this. Many others, though thoroughly familiar with my background and personal character are not acquainted with my writings.

With this in mind, I shall give you a few names from different fields, in addition to the Sponsors mentioned in the application.

Dear Miss Quinby:

I had a good talk with Dr. Bunzel and was very much interested in the outline of his book, which he let me see and which I am returning to you herewith.

I am extremely puzzled to know what suggestion to make to him. He hardly seems to me to fit into any academic niche, and I am afraid it is not very likely that a place could be found which would give him freedom to pursue the researches in which he is interested. He has so far published nothing which would be a guarantee of success, and while anyone would be impressed by talking with him, research foundations are pretty sure to demand something more tangible in the way of evidence.

Under the circumstances, my advice to him would be to try to find some regular academic post, either as a teacher of German literature or the history of art or sociology or some other regular academic subject.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Sir,

I am wondering if it would be possible to receive from you a comprehensive and up to date history of the development of Princeton and a survey of its current position, or else a recommendation as to where I could best obtain information on this subject. I will be happy whatever is necessary.

My brother, a civic leader and educator in Bures s/Yvettes, near Paris, is preparing to present to the French government a plan for establishing in Bures an institute for advanced studies similar to that at Princeton. He is most interested in obtaining material on the founding, development and current statistics of Princeton and the Institute directly from you for although he has access to some sources of such information in Paris, he is especially desirous of studying American publications on the subject.

Anything which you might be able to supply to me will be gratefully received. Thank you kindly for your assistance.

Dear Foreign Student Advisor:

Would you write down on the enclosed card and return it to us the names and addresses of all Burmese students at your institution?

On March 1, 2, and 3 Bucknell University will hold its ninth annual Burma-Bucknell Weekend. At this time we invite to our campus all Burmese students studying in the eastern part of the States. The program consists of discussions, class lectures, social programs, a formal banquet, seminars and field trips. Because Bucknell has had a long relationship with Burma, we have become a place of reunion. The program has the cooperation of the Embassy of the Union of Burma, of their delegation to the United Nations, of the U.S. Department of State, of the Asia Foundation, of the Institute of International Education, and other private agencies. Last year over ninety guests came. Burma's ambassador and members of his staff were here to greet the students. Many of Burma's scholars participated.

We would appreciate, therefore, your giving us the names of your Burmese students so that we can extend to them an invitation to be present. It would also be helpful if you could encourage them to attend. While we are prepared to pay their expenses, it is advisable for them to come in groups by car, or to come by bus.

Dear Ayselotte,

In your new work as Director of the Institute for Advanced Study I wonder whether you are interested in the publication of books? or whether you only award grants for research?

I have just finished writing a little book entitled The Story of Mount Sinai-Horeb, the 'Mountain of God' of Moses and the Israelites, as revealed in the very ancient non-Egyptian Miners' inscriptions of nearby Serabit el-

Kha'dim... It is not a popular type of book but a study dealing with some of the problems raised by the unexpected contents of the Serabit inscriptions. Should you hear of anyone in-

Dear Burrage:

I am delighted to have your note of July 27th, but I am sorry to say that we do not have at the Institute any independent publication fund. Indeed, it is just the other way. Our professors and members produce so many works that we are always looking outside for means to publish them. My advice to you would be to apply to the American Philosophical Society. The Society has a considerable fund, administered by a Publications Committee, for producing scholarly works, and I should think that would be the best source of help for you.

Dear Dr. Aydelotte:

Thank you for your recent letter. I shall be very glad to postpone my trip to Princeton until after your vacation. Please let me know what week-end will be most convenient for you to see me, and I am sure I can arrange to be there.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Butterfield:

I have not been to Maine as yet, having been kept here by other duties. I shall be glad to see you if you can come down on Friday, August 2. If it suits you equally well, however, come a little later in August. I shall then know more as to just what can be done here at the Institute.

Yours sincerely,

Mr. Richard D. Butterfield

My dear Miss Eichelser:

In reply to my last letter

Dr. Aydelotte wrote that he would see me when he returned from Maine at the end of July. Will he be able to give me some time this coming Friday or Saturday, or would some other week be better? I can reach Princeton by 10 o'clock on either of those mornings.

Very truly yours,

Richard D. Butterfield

My dear Mr. Butterfield:

Your letter of the twenty-second has been received while Miss Eichelsur is on vacation.

Unfortunately Dr. Aydelotte will not be able to see you on Friday or Saturday of this week. He will write to you next week suggesting a time that will be convenient for him.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Butterfield:

I should be most happy to see you in Princeton either at the end of June or when I return from Maine at the end of July. Perhaps the latter date would be better if equally convenient for you.

While we shall undoubtedly need a superintendent of buildings and grounds here eventually, I do not know how long it will be before we shall be ready to make such an appointment. At the moment we have only one building and it may be that for the time being it is better for us to seek expert advice on individual problems rather than to appoint a high grade man who would not have enough to do to fill his time.

There is something of the same difficulty about the work of Professor Herzfeld in architectural drawing. It would seem to me from his description something that could readily be done by a good draftsman in this neighborhood in his spare hours, and I am not sure that it would justify a regular appointment.

I mention these discouraging considerations in order that you should not come down here under any misapprehension. At the same time I want to assure you that I shall be very glad to see you if other business made it convenient for you to come this way.

Yours sincerely,

FRANK AYDELOTTE, Director

My dear Dr. Aydelotte:

Will you be so kind as to grant me an interview in Princeton sometime at the end of June or in July? I should like at that time to talk over with you the work which Professor Hengfeld hopes to have done in connection with the publication of his books.

I have been greatly intrigued with the idea of doing this sort of work since last summer when I talked it over with Professor Hengfeld. I enjoy making careful drawings, and I was pleased to see that Professor Hengfeld liked the samples of work which I did at the Yale School of the Fine Arts.

Mr. Lorton tells me that in his last conversation with you, you mentioned your need for a Superintendent of Buildings at the Institute, and that he suggested that the two positions might be worked together until Professor Heyfield's work demands more time. Although I do not know what the exact nature of that work would be, I think my training and experience in architecture might enable me to work into it satisfactorily. Five years ago my father, who was then Commissioner of Education in Connecticut, appointed one of Mr. Loomis' men whose training was similar to mine as Supervisor of Buildings and Plans for the State Department of Education, and he has filled the position very capably. I mention this case because I think the two positions might be somewhat similar.

I would like very much to talk these things over with you, and I hope you will be able to give me an interview.

Very truly yours,

Richard D. Butterfield

Dear Larson:

I have talked over with Professor Herzfeld the question of a place here for Mr. Butterfield but doubt whether it is feasible for us to assume the responsibility for so expensive a man. Professor Herzfeld has agreed that it would be wiser for him to ask some local draftsman to do jobs for him from time to time, perhaps in his evenings or Saturday afternoons, rather than to take on a full-time man at the present moment.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Dr. Aydelotte:

During Dr. Flexner's administration he asked me to find a draftsman for Professor Herzfeld, a man who could also develop for any work of the Institute - archeological drawings, bookplates, etc. I suggested a man in my organization and very highly recommended him for this purpose at $250 a month. He is an ideal man for the job and Professor Herzfeld has met him.

I have been carrying Mr. Butterfield since that time waiting for word from the Institute. I shall have the problem shortly or reducing my staff and do not like to let Mr. Butterfield go if the Institute has need of him. He is a wonderful draftsman and would be the best man possible for the work at the Institute. It would be an ideal job for a man of his type. He is a Dartmouth graduate and a graduate of the Yale School of Architecture.

Would you be so kind as to discuss this with Professor Herzfeld and let me know whether or not the job is still open so that I can make a decision about Mr. Butterfield.

Sincerely yours,
